

THROUGH A BRIDGE

A Traction Engine and Hay Bailer go Down

The Engineer Killed Al- most Instantly

On Friday of last week, news came to town of the awful accident at Crockett's run, but a few miles north of Logan. A traction engine under the management of Henry Asbell, in attempting to go over the bridge, broke through, precipitating bridge and the whole outfit down into the rocky gulch 30 feet below. Mr. Asbell went down with the wreck, killing him almost instantly. The body was recovered by his companions and he was borne into the house of Sam Helber nearby. Nobody else was hurt as the other men in the crew were walking behind.

There is quite a little hill to descend in approaching the bridge and a slight turn in the road. It is supposed that the heavy engine got over to one side of the bridge too far, throwing all the weight on our stringer, which snapped and let the whole outfit down. The bridge was about 50 feet long, and considered a very strong iron structure. The engine turned completely over and now lies inverted in the deep rocky gulch.

Mr. Asbell had but very few marks on him, the worst being when he fell across an iron beam on his stomach. This was probably the injury that caused his death.

It is said that this same engine and bailer had crossed this bridge several times this season, but it seems that by the swing of the heavy weight strongly on the one side of the bridge, was too much for it. It is a hard blow to the many friends of Henry Asbell, in and about his home at Enterprise. The county commissioners were soon on the ground and are taking action at once to rebuild the structure.

It don't seem to be the fault of any, as the bridge was a good one and had borne such loads many times. The accident is indeed deplorable.

Death of Mrs. Enoch Mar- tin.

On Sunday evening occurred the death of Mrs. Enoch Martin at Ewing in her 72 year. About one year ago she suffered a stroke of paralysis and later received a fall that hurt her hip. However in the past few weeks she has been able to walk a little again. Sunday evening when Mr. Martin was assisting her to retire she became very short of breath and in a few minutes swooned away and was gone. During the day she had seemed cheerful, and talked and joked freely with her sons whom had come out from Logan to see her. The funeral took place on Wednesday, Rev. Wilson, of Logan, officiating.

Glass in Hocking.

Some one has remarked, that there is sufficient glass in the hills and vales of Hocking county to supply the entire world with that product for the next five hundred years. It is further stated on good authority, that the best clay in the United States is to be found in Hocking county and it is conceded, that the largest clay works in the nation if not in the world, is now being constructed in Hocking county at the village of Greendale.

LABOR TRAINS.

Logan Interested in Daily Train to Greendale.

Board of Trade Meet and Take the Matter Up.

That there is probability of a labor train running out of Logan to Greendale there is no doubt, and upon this probability the Logan Board of Trade was called to meet at the city building Friday evening of last week to look to such consumation.

There was a good attendance presided over by the President, A. C. Tipton; Mr. McKay acting as secretary. Much discussion and explanation was in order for a while, and then the chair appointed a committee to go to Columbus and wait upon the Railroad official and see if such train could be brought about. The committee is: F. M. McKay, D. V. Thurness, Frank Adcock, James Bebout and J. B. Dollison. Also a committee was appointed to ascertain about how many houses in Logan for rent and how many boarders could be accommodated; they are J. W. Gabriel, Sam Brooke and C. W. James.

A labor train to Greendale from Logan every day would be a great accommodation to the 400 employees at that mammoth brick plant, and would be a big thing for Logan. Those employees could thereby live here and work in Greendale.

Out for Mayor.

Editor Chatfield has this to say concerning his aspirations for the office of Mayor of Murray City:

"Since our announcement last week in reply to questions, that we would be in the race for Mayor next year, we have learned, that the saloonist have made their selection for mayor, according to the report of Henry Hale.

"We take it from this announcement made thus and at such an early period, means, that the saloonists again put C. A. Chatfield on the defense, and that they mean to force the old issue of law or no law. We stand where we have always stood in the matter and so far as we know now, will be a candidate for the office in question."

When the authors of "The Girl Who Looks Like Me" completed the play for Kathryn Osterman, they gave the stage an entirely new and novel idea, that of making a roaring rollicking farce for women. It is all the more creditable to the writers that they have succeeded in bringing forth a play that is really funny, without being in the slightest degree coarse or unsavory. There is not a suggestive line nor a situation that is not clean and wholesome fun, and is provided by the natural humor of the situation. The action of the play is unusually rapid. Situations follow each other so quickly that they almost overlap. When it seems that every phase of the theme has been exhausted, now and totally unexpected turns are given it, and the audience is sent off into another roar of laughter. While the two women are the pivots, all the other characters are cleverly drawn, and while they play up to the principals, they do it in a way that makes them themselves prominent.

Death of George Kil- bourne.

George Bancroft Kilbourne, aged 33, son of Colonel James Kilbourne, a prominent manufacturer and leading citizen, died at 9:10 o'clock last night at the Grand Pacific hotel, Chicago, from pneumonia, after a 10 days illness. Mr. Kilbourne had been ill for some time. Two weeks ago he was thought to be recovering, but was taken sick again. His parents were summoned to Chicago Thursday, November 15. He continued in certain critical condition until his death occurred, although Wednesday hopes were held out for his getting well. The best known physicians of Chicago attended him. Including among them was Dr. Billings, whose reputation is world-wide. The young man's condition was such as to prevent his removal from the hotel to a hospital.

"Thanksgiving Day."

In old November's cloudy gloom
When field and forest trees are bare,
When birds are gone and flowers dead,
And winter's touch is in the air,
There comes a time, a joyful time,
That calls to us where'er we roam,
And bids us drop our daily cares
And gather 'round our boyhood's home.

With hearts so full of happiness
And pleasure beaming from our eyes,
We grasp each friendly hand at will
And share the joy that in them lies.
The old man's face is wreathed in smiles;
He greets each one with words of cheer;
The mother trembling in her joy
Can scarce repress the welling tear.

Around the table all are placed,
And mirth and merriment once more
Shine in each face. The father now
Tells stories that he oft before
Has told. Each one his jokes repeat
Of former days, and laughs is glee,
As memory brings the old times back,
That were so dear to them and me.

The dinner o'er we roam about,
We visit each familiar spot;
The old hillside we climb again
The orchard, wood and meadow lot.
We talk our homely matters o'er;
We sing beneath the hazy moon;
We laugh and shout in pure delight,
For life was then just entering June.

The dream is o'er; I wake to know
Those joys that were, have long gone by;
The dear old home-folks now at rest
Beneath the sod in silence lie,
And I, whose life has passed its noon,
The dearest pleasure I enjoy
Is living o'er the scenes again
That were so dear to me, a boy.
